

Please keep the NAB from messing with satellite radio, since the 70s they have already made it too commercial to listen to. Us xm subscribers pay for a service and should rightfully receive it without any say of the NAB. Instead of going against satellite radio why doesn't the regular radio broadcasters of this great nation get together and do something new or innovated to bring back more listeners instead of losing more and more each day to xm and sirrus? I mean how many times a day can you listen to the same old song much less the same old commercials?
